The Cheapest Reliable Insurance that is Possible.

In these days of so called cheap insurance, offered under the name of "Mutual Benefit," "Mutual Relief," "Co-operative," and "Assessment Societies," in all of which the member pays a definite admission fee and other charges and receives an indefinite contract dependent upon collections from fellow members, the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, S. C. Bull, Agent, with a definite sum in cash assets amounting to $108,876,178.51, calls attention to its semi-endowment policy, which furnishes insurance against loss by death, for a period of twenty years, at a resulting cost, which is cheaper than any of the above named companies, and for the prompt settlement of which the cash is at all times ready without appeal to "Brother Members."
